In the Upside-Down World

EPISODE #3

By Warren Litzman

There is nothing as disconcerting to this upside-down world as when somebody who tries to live by the rules of the Creator comes along. The governments in this world, whether they are civil, religious, or big business, all feel they have done their best to serve and make everybody happy. But then a person, like Sarah Palin, comes along having broken all the rules set by the “gods” of the upside-down world. One, she was raised in a Christian family. Two, she married the man she loved. Three, she raised her family under the same rules of the Creator. Four, she served the Creator as best she could. Five, she became a politician attempting to live by the rules of her Creator.

Now, don't you think this is a fine woman capable of fixing some things in this upside-down world? No, sir! The gods that run the upside-down world are not about to allow her to be who she is. So, immediately when she was chosen to run as the republican vice-president, the gods that operate under the rule of “good and evil,” which came from Satan way back in the beginning, turned loose to destroy her.

The fact is, an upside-down world is not ready to accept a person who is “right side up.” A good marriage doesn't fit in this world. Raising a family under the Creator's rules is “old fashion.” Being an outspoken Christian is out of tune with the upside-down world that is anti-God, anti-Christ, and anti-godly because such living brings conviction to them.

It remains to be seen what Sarah will do in this upside-down world, but one thing is for sure: all those who know humans will never straighten out this world by themselves are thankful for the fresh air Sarah has already brought to this dirty, stinking, upside-down world. I pray there be many more like her. See you next time.
